What famous person would you like to meet and why?

I ran through lists in my head of famous musicians, religious leaders, and movie stars and think that the most interesting persons would be either Oprah Winfrey or Barack Obama. They have both come up from challenging childhoods to become leaders in their fields. I believe that I could learn from either of these folks.

When did you first become interested in working in finance?

When I found in 1971 that a professional viola player did not make enough money to pay the rent, I took a position as a switchboard operator for a stock brokerage firm by the name of Walston and Company. I found the industry fascinating and challenging enough to keep me interested and engaged for all these years.

In three sentences, tell me about your role at the firm.

I am the BETA liaison, which is a system administrative role. I review and approve the monthly client statements for both BETA and Phase3. I take whatever other projects come my way that are interesting and challenging. (Fourth sentence: I have done corporate training here at Wedbush that encompassed not just the regulations, but the history and culture of our firm.)

What do you like to do in your spare time?

I love to play with my grandchildren. I am an avid reader. I am also one of the vocal soloists at my church (available for weddings and funerals).

What is one thing that most people would be surprised to learn about you?

When in college, I worked for the Dallas Cowboys' Training Camp.

If you could visit any place in the world, where would it be and why?

I would like to visit Norway, which is the land of my ancestors. I would like to see if I feel an affinity for the land.
